Civil War Days at the Medical College of Virginia

RUSSELL V. BOWERS, M.Sc. '39, MD '50

On the first Sunday morning of April, 1865, the President of the Confederate States of America, Jefferson Davis, and his family were attending services at St. Paul's Church just across the street from the Capitol of Virginia. A courier quietly slipped to the President's pew and handed him a note—Petersburg had fallen. The yearlong siege of Richmond was over and the exodus from Richmond began. Soon the heart of Richmond was purposely ignited by its own citizens. The offices of Surgeon-General Samuel Preston Moore, located near St. Paul's Church, were a total loss due to the spreading flames. All stored medical and surgical records and reports of the medical corps and hospitals of the Confederacy, accumulated during the four years of the Civil War, were lost forever.

The preparation of an adequate history of Confederate medicine will never be made—however, the almost new Egyptian Building (1845), overlooking nearby Shockoe Valley, housed the full-fledged Medical College of Virginia, organized by the "incurably professorial" Dr. Augustus Lockman Warner, lately of the University of Virginia department of medicine. MCV began as a department of medicine of the Prince Edward County institution—Hampden-Sydney College. The Egyptian Building, the best intact example of Egyptian architecture in America, housed lecture rooms, laboratories, and a complete infirmary from which one is able to make "somebody who wasn't there understand a part of what happened" in the early and also later days of the Civil War and Richmond's influence on Confederate medicine, education, and hospital care.

From its founding in 1838 to March, 1858, the Medical College of Virginia had graduated only 416 physicians, an average of almost 21 each year. In the sessions from 1859 through 1864, 271 physicians were graduated, accelerating the yearly average to 54 for each session. The total enrolled was 713—graduation mortality rates were high—only 1 out of 3 successfully completed his courses.

Enrollment and graduation figures were:

	Enrolled	Graduated
1859-60	228*	82
1860-61	148	58
1861-62	27	37
1862-63	110	46
1863-64	155	48

*(144 from Philadelphia)

** (56 from Philadelphia)

*** (Among these Simon Baruch, father of Bernard M. Baruch)

Many of these graduates entered the Confederate States Army which was made up almost entirely of general practitioners who had served in all parts of the South during their professional lives. They were most unprepared for the vast amount of traumatic surgery which they were to treat. A note in the records of the session 1863-64 shows that "2 surgeons—21 assistant surgeons—5 assistant surgeons and apothecaries entered the Army."

The University of Pennsylvania school of medicine contributed more physician-alumni to the war effort—North and South—than any other medical school. About 1,742 medical alumni participated, 616 of these served the Confederate cause. The reason, the late Dr. W. B. Blanton stated, was "there were no medical schools in Virginia in the first quarter of the 19th century;" also Southern physicians taught in Philadelphia and no doubt attracted Southern students. The remarkably popular Dr. Samuel Henry Dickson was a South Carolinian and sat in a chair of medicine.

Philadelphia's impact was most marked on Virginians; for example, up until 1860, of 5,501 graduates from the University of Pennsylvania, 1,749 were from Virginia. To appraise the contributions of the Medical College of Virginia during the Civil War, we must go back to the medical schools of Philadelphia and the year of 1859.

A large quiz class was conducted by Drs. Hunter H. McGuire, Francis E. Luckett, and Doctor Pancoast. The students were a tough lot, so Dr. McGuire told his son Dr. Stuart McGuire, describing them as wearing their hair long, reaching down to their shoulders, their heads covered with large black sombrero hats, and the frontier students attending class wearing Bowie knives. There were some who appeared more gentlemanly attired, such as John H. Cameron of Goshen, Virginia, who graduated from Virginia Military Institute (1857) and also attended "two sessions" of lectures at the University of Virginia department of medicine.

During the early winter when the body of the intemperate and fanatical John Brown was carried through the streets of Philadelphia, en route to be buried in New York, brawls broke out between the Southern students and the rough elements of the city. Soon conditions became intolerable and Dr. Hunter McGuire called a mass meeting of Southern students and proposed they go to a Southern school.

On Saturday, 17th December, L. S. Joynes, dean of the Medical College of Virginia, received a telegram from student J. Quarles:—"Are Southern students admitted for the remainder of the session?" That evening a special executive session of the faculty met. Later in the evening another message signed Hunter H. McGuire and F. E. Luckett was received:—"Upon what terms will your school receive 150 from this place 1st January? Answer at once."

Before the faculty adjourned a third telegram, signed Hunter H. McGuire, was delivered: "We anxiously await your reply. For God's sake let it be favorable—only diplomas fee. We are in earnest, confidential."

The faculty accepted the only course open to them and wired back to come to Richmond. The city thought the idea magnificent and sufficient funds were appropriated to underwrite the project. On 21st December, 244 students entrained for Richmond, Virginia, leaving a hiatus in the medical mecca of Philadelphia which has never been closed.

Dr. Thomas W. Murrell, M'01, UCM, has so colorfully written, "Of the journey to Richmond there is no record. It is fortunate they were very young, because to us pampered moderns it must have been a rugged experience; but they had to endure much more for the old town was deeply stirred and was prepared to do itself proud. Naturally, since there was a committee of arrangements, there had to be a parade. So they were met at the station at Eighth and Broad Streets by a military company with a band; a column formed which marched down three blocks of streets into the Capitol Square and up to the Governor's Mansion. There Governor Wise stood on the portico and according to next day's paper, 'Addressed the guests of the city with much animation for more than an hour. One of the students responded in a short address. Afterwards, the mayor delivered a short and telling discourse.'

"Imagine, if you can, riding all night and half the next day on a train more primitive and with a rougher road bed than anything you have ever experienced, and then to stand for an hour and a half on a cold winter day out in the open to listen to endless speeches. They must have been tough and one wonders how they lost the war. But the end was not yet. A big banquet was served at the Columbia Hotel. There were seats for 600 guests, so there were innumerable toasts; and one knows an exhausted bunch of boys were bedded down that night.

"Writers about this affair have always gotten their information from the faculty minutes of the Medical College of Virginia and the newspapers of the time. Recently were found two reports of the dean to the Board of Visitors of the College, the last of which makes a better summary than anything I can write. This is dated March 14, 1860.

"In pursuance of the purpose announced in this and other communications, on the twenty-second of December a body of students numbering 244 arrived in this city from Philadelphia to whom a cordial welcome was extended by the Governor, the faculty and the students of this College, and the citizens of Richmond.

"The number of seceding students was subsequently increased by further arrivals; but of the whole number only 144 regularly matriculated in this institution, of whom two afterwards directed their names to be erased from this list. A considerable proportion of those who came to Richmond continued their journey to other southern cities and connected themselves with schools there situated.

"Those who matriculated here were placed by the faculty on the same footing which they had occupied in Philadelphia and were admitted to the same privileges with the students of our own classes. That is to say, the evidence of matriculation and of the payment of professors' fees in Philadelphia were accepted as sufficient to entitle them to a free ticket of admission to all the lectures in this College for the remainder of the session.

"It is proper to add, by way of correction of a statement above made, that of the 144 seceding students who matriculated in this institution, two were from the University of New York and one from the Albany Medical College.

"Of those from Philadelphia 117 were from Jefferson Medical College, 17 from the University of Pennsylvania, and two from the Pennsylvania College.

"It is deemed unnecessary to go into any further details in regard to this affair as all of the most important material facts relating to the action of the faculty and the reasons on which it was based have been given.

"In conclusion I would like to state for the information of the Board of Visitors, that the whole number of matriculates in this institution during the late spring (deducting the two from Philadelphia who withdrew) was 228. The entire number of graduates was 82.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

Dean of the Faculty"

In 1859-60 the Legislature appropriated $30,000 for a College infirmary. (MCV became a State institution in 1860.) Dean Levin Joynes said, "The new hospital building, for which funds were appropriated by the Legislature, 1859-60, was completed and thrown open for the reception of patients in April, 1861. Its capacity for 80 patients soon proved inadequate to the demands upon it, consequently the hospital wards in the Egyptian Building, which had been closed, were opened again to receive the numerous sick soldiers who were thronging to the doors of the hospital for relief. Prior to the establishment of a sufficient number of hospitals by the Confederate authorities even space thus obtained was inadequate to the requirements, and one of the lecture rooms had to be opened for the reception of the sick. Soldiers in the service of the state were first admitted, under a contract or agreement with the Governor and Executive Council, made in April, 1861; and, upon transfer of the forces of Virginia to the Confederate States, this arrangement was continued by the Surgeon-General of the Confederate States Army; the privilege of admission to the hospital, however, being not limited to troops of Virginia but extended to all states alike. Up to near the close of 1862, both soldiers and officers continued to be received—the former at the charge of the government, the latter at their own expense. Since that time, although soldiers have no longer been sent to the hospital, officers have still been received as private patients; and negroes in the employment of the government have been treated in the wards devoted to that class of patients.

"During the whole progress of the war, as before its commencement, patients have been received from the general public both white and slaves."

Reports to the Second Auditor of Virginia give these figures on the care of patients:

1861

Officers and Soldiers Admitted .....	1,015
Other Patients .....	239
	1,254
Deaths of officers and soldiers numbered 67
or 6.60%
Deaths of other patients numbered 33 or 13.81%

1862

Officers and Soldiers Admitted .....	845
Other Patients .....	382
	1,227
Deaths of officers and soldiers numbered 103
or 12.19%
Deaths of other patients numbered 55 or 12.88%

Dean Joynes in his report of 1862 said, "The higher mortality among officers and soldiers in 1862, as compared with the preceding year, was due in part to the greater number of gun shot wounds admitted but also to the larger proportion of cases of serious disease received from the camps."

It is interesting to note the financial situation of the College in those war years. The report to the Second Auditor showed a balance of $625.27 at the end of 1862 and at the end of 1863, a balance of $1,583.84. The hospital or infirmary, as it was called, was closed due to financial difficulties from 1864 to 1867.

In addition to keeping a school of medicine open, faculty members participated actively in the war. When the Convention of Virginia on April 24, 1861, passed the ordinance organizing the military forces of the state, a medical department with a surgeon general and ten assistant surgeons was provided. Dr. Charles Bell Gibson, professor of surgery and surgical anatomy, was appointed surgeon-general. After the formation of the medical department of the regular army of the Confederacy, it was Dr. James B. McCaw, professor of chemistry and pharmacy, who planned and organized the famous Chimborazo Hospital. Dr. David H. Tucker, professor of the theory and practice of medicine, served as a surgeon at the Winder Hospital on Cary Street in the far west end. He was one of the physicians called in as a consultant in the illness and death of Stonewall Jackson. Others were Arthur E. Peticolas, professor of general and special anatomy, commissioned as a surgeon; Levin S. Joynes, dean and professor of medicine and medical jurisprudence, commissioned as an assistant surgeon; and Isaiah H. White, professor of chemistry and pharmacy, commissioned as a surgeon.

The Association of the Army and Navy Surgeons of the Confederate States was organized 22nd August, 1863, in Richmond, Virginia, to include the staff of the surgeon-general's office and the surgeons of the forty-four hospitals in the Richmond area. Surgeon-General Samuel P. Moore was elected president; W. A. W. Spottswood, vice-president; and W. A. Davis and W. A. Thom, secretaries. Members of the Medical College of Virginia not attached to government service were elected honorary members.

The Medical College of Virginia was the only medical school in the Confederacy, now in existence, that graduated a class every year during the war. The statement in the catalog announcement for the session 1863-64 gives the thinking of the faculty:

"In announcing a course of Lectures under the present circumstances, the faculty are not unaware of the difficulties which they will encounter and the obstacles which will prevent a full attendance upon their instructions; but it has not seemed to them necessary or wise, that the business of education, and especially of medical education, should be suspended during a state of war. While the greater number of those who would seek their instruction will be engaged in the active and perilous duties of the soldier, there are yet others, scattered through the different States of the Confederacy, who have been discharged from the service, or are exempt from military duty by reason of physical disability or otherwise, and who desire to prosecute the studies already commenced; and to all such, as well as to the medical students employed in numerous hospitals of Richmond, the desired opportunity should not be denied.

"The motives thus presented for a continuation of the usual course of instruction during the past winter, were fully justified by the result—the number of young men who were in a position to continue their medical studies, without a violation of the military obligations, having been found to exceed all previous calculation. Of the matriculates of the last session who were undergraduates, fully three-fourths had already attended one or more courses of lectures, either in this or in other schools, and were therefore entitled to present themselves as candidates for the degree; hence the large proportion of graduates, as exhibited by the catalogue, a proportion which, under ordinary circumstances, would appear excessive."

The alumni and faculty of the Medical College of Virginia played a major role in both the medical and military history of the War Between the States. It is desired that the alumnus of the 1960's will have a forceful appreciation and understanding of his fellow alumni of the 1860's and the heritage of his medical college in the Civil War.

Hunter Holmes
McGuire
1835-1900

Dr. Hunter Holmes McGuire was born on the 11th of October, 1835, in Winchester, Virginia. He attended the Academy in that city and graduated from the Winchester Medical College in 1855 at the age of nineteen, after two years of study. Following graduation he taught anatomy and practiced medicine with his father, Dr. Hugh Holmes McGuire, for two years. He then moved to Philadelphia where he matriculated at the Jefferson Medical College and conducted a "quiz class" which proved popular with many Southern students who attended the medical schools in that city.

After the execution of John Brown in Charles Town, Virginia, in December, 1859, his body was carried through Philadelphia. The feelings aroused by the occasion resulted in numerous altercations between the townspeople and the Southern students. Dr. McGuire called a meeting of his "quiz class" and they decided to leave Philadelphia for more congenial surroundings south of the Potomac. An exchange of telegrams with the Medical College of Virginia resulted in over three hundred students from Jefferson and the University of Pennsylvania coming to Richmond.

Dr. McGuire and one hundred and forty of these students enrolled in the Medical College and he received his second M.D. degree in March of the following year.

When Virginia seceded in April, 1861, Dr. McGuire entered the Confederate Army as a private in the Second Virginia Regiment but the following month he was appointed a surgeon in the medical department and directed to report to General Stonewall Jackson as Medical Director of the Army of the Shenandoah. Although of different backgrounds and temperaments each struck a responsive note in the other and a warm friendship developed which was terminated only by the death of General Jackson at Guinea Station on May 10, 1863, two years to the day from their first meeting. A striking parallel existed in the careers of these two men. Dr. McGuire became the outstanding field surgeon of the Civil War, while General Jackson's genius as a military leader was unrivaled during his brief span of command. Early in the War Dr. McGuire established a policy of immediate exchange of captured medical officers which was adopted by the North and later bore fruit in a provision of the Geneva Convention and the International Red Cross in 1864.

Following the close of the War in 1865, Dr. McGuire came to Richmond where he was appointed professor of surgery in the Medical College of Virginia. While his practice covered the broad field of all present day surgical specialties, his work in urology was especially outstanding and many of his original contributions fell in this field of surgery.

In 1893 he organized and became president of the University College of Medicine which was situated directly across Clay Street from the present Alumni House. This continued as a separate medical school until 1913 when it merged with the Medical College of Virginia. In 1882 Dr. McGuire founded the St. Luke's Home for the Sick in a former hotel on the corner of Sock and Governor Streets. This was Richmond's first private hospital and it continues today at St. Luke's Hospital.

Dr. McGuire was fortunate in the era in which he lived. His organizational skill was tested and developed in both military and civil surgery. His professional life coincided with that period when the work of Pasteur, Lister, Billroth, and Halsted was revolutionizing surgery. He saw the acceptance of anesthesia, antiseptics, and asepsis. His ability was recognized in the North as well as in the South. His reputation preceded him to England and he was received there as America's outstanding surgeon.

When Dr. McGuire died in 1900 he had lived several lives during the sixty-five years allotted him and in doing so he had become Virginia's most famous physician. The following inscription was placed on his monument which was erected in Capitol Square:

PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL AND OF THE
AMERICAN SURGICAL ASSOCIATIONS;
FOUNDER OF THE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE;
MEDICAL DIRECTOR, JACKSON'S CORPS,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA;
AN EMINENT CIVIL AND MILITARY
SURGEON,
AND BELOVED PHYSICIAN;
AN ABLE TEACHER AND VIGOROUS
WRITER,
A USEFUL CITIZEN AND BROAD HUMANITARIAN,
GIFTED IN MIND AND GENEROUS IN HEART, THIS MONUMENT IS ERECTED BY HIS MANY FRIENDS."

The Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association of the Medical College of Virginia

The annual meeting of the Alumni Association of the Medical College of Virginia was held at 2 P.M. on June 2, 1961, in the board room of the Alumni House.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Dr. W. C. Henderson. On motion duly made by Dr. Richard A. Michaux and seconded by Mrs. Sabra S. Russell, the minutes of the June 4, 1960, annual meeting were approved.

In the absence of Dr. James T. Tucker, treasurer, a copy of the treasurer's report was handed out.

Treasurer's Report

It is regrettable that I am not with you on this occasion. I herewith hand you the treasurer's report for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1960. You will note that our income was $3,970.51 more than in 1959, and I want to take this opportunity to thank the executive secretary and her staff for the excellent work they have done in collecting this enormous amount of money.

The fiscal year of the Alumni Association of the Medical College of Virginia runs from January 1 through December 31. The Association operates with three accounts.

Dr. W. C. Henderson delivered his report of the year's activities of the Association:

President's Report, 1961

This year we are celebrating a great event in the history of our country, the Centennial of the Civil War. It is a time to restudy, to re-evaluate, and to understand that our forefathers had the courage and the faith to put principle ahead of self-interest. It is a time for us who live now to realize we are heirs of a great tradition, something that gives meaning and validity to our national life.

Also, this year we celebrate the 72nd year since the organization of the Alumni Association of MCV. It is also a time for all alumni to pause, think, and realize we are heirs of a great medical heritage at MCV. To understand that the opportunities, which we had as students and the students of today enjoy at MCV, did not come about by accident. They are the results of many years of sacrifice and labor by a group of dedicated men, who, by their intelligent planning and foresight through the years, have brought our school to its present position—one of the great schools of our nation. Alumni have through the years felt a duty and an obligation to our school and have given of their time and talents to leave a glorious medical heritage for generations to follow.

So as I make my annual report of the activities of the Alumni Association, I do so with a feeling of humility and with a fervent hope that we will satisfactorily uphold the traditions and further the causes of our institution this year.

Since you have been informed of our activities through The Scarab, I shall not try to give a detailed report but will review briefly just a few of the highlights.

Two new chapters have been organized—one at Winchester, Virginia, and another in Florida. We are in touch with interested alumni in Charleston, West Virginia, and hope to have a chapter there before the end of the year.

The general Alumni Association has been represented at chapter meetings in Winchester, the Washington area, Roanoke, Richmond, and Florida, also at the Southside dental component, alumni luncheon at Virginia State Dental Association, and alumni dinner at the North Carolina Medical Association. We have invitations and plan to attend chapter meetings at Philadelphia, New York, Tidewater, Peninsula, the West Virginia chapter at Medical Society of West Virginia, and the alumni dinner at the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association, as well as the alumni dinner at the Medical Society of Virginia.

Mr. R. Reginald Rooke, secretary of the Association, gave his report covering the activities of the Association:

Secretary's Report

Your Board of Trustees has met three times since our last annual meeting. Each meeting has been well attended and serious and dedicated consideration has been given to all matters pertaining to the welfare and advancement of our association.

Since our activities have been described to you in detail by the various committee chairmen, I will not elaborate on them further in this report.

Miss Minnie M. Franck, executive secretary, was called on for her report:

Report of the Executive Secretary

Five years ago, I came to work for you and as I look back over these years, I'm impressed all over again by the help and

I want to thank representatives from the College who have given of their time to attend meetings with us.

Dr. A. L. Martone is general chairman of the membership committee and heads the committee for dentistry; Dr. Henry Spencer, medicine; Mr. G. F. Henley, pharmacy; and Mrs. Anne Mahoney, nursing. We are making an intensive effort this year to contact all graduates out of the state as well as in. To date the enrollment is 1,833.

At our annual banquet the Alumni Association met their fourth installment of a $10,000 check for the lounge in the new dormitory. This lounge is appropriately marked so that the present and all future students will know our generation did not forget its obligation to MCV.

Today we begin the Fourth Scientific Assembly sponsored by the Alumni Association. I am sure by now you have had an opportunity to see the program and join with me in expressing our sincere thanks to the able chairman, Dr. Wyndham B. Blanton, Jr., to the faculty of the medical school, and to all his committee for their tireless efforts at assembling this fine program.

One of the highlights of my activities this year has been regular attendance with the Board of Visitors of the College. It is an inspiration to observe the dedicated service of these gentlemen to our Alma Mater.

Let me extend my sincere thanks to the editorial committee and especially the editor, Dr. James T. Tucker, for the excellent job they are doing with The Scarab.

My grateful appreciation goes to all the hard-working committees, the officers, and the Board for the fine cooperation they have given me.

Let me thank you again for the privilege of serving as your president this year.

In conclusion, my able predecessors started the Alumni Association on a journey of growth and success. This year I have tried to steer it in the right direction. If this has been done it was possible only because of the untiring energy, unlimited interest, and the sound advice of our executive secretary, Miss Franck.

Respectfully submitted,
W. C. HENDERSON, D.D.S., President

I am happy to report that our association continues to grow both in membership and services to its members.

It has been a distinct pleasure and privilege to work with our officers on our Board and our executive secretary, Miss Minnie Franck.

Respectfully submitted,
R. REGINALD ROOKE, Secretary

You have taken on such obligations as the lounge and the house next door which frankly staggered me, but you have come through each time and, as Dr. Henderson has said, paid $40,000 on the $100,000 for the Alumni Lounge and almost half on the 1107 East Clay Street house.

The Scarab is now being sent to over 9,500 alumni and friends, against about 7,300 in 1956. It has grown too in content through your cooperation and that of the College.

We have gotten to know many of you through attendance at chapter meetings which we feel a real privilege as is working with the officers of these groups.

We can say with pride because it's from the efforts of the committees that membership has grown from 1,886 in 1956 to 2,507 last year. Our percentage of membership is above the national average for alumni associations.

So it is with real sincerity that I say to you again thank you for the privilege of working with you.

Respectfully submitted,
MINNIE M. FRANCK, Executive Secretary

Dr. Henderson announced the newly elected members of the Board of Trustees and reminded the members of the Association that the terms of the officers and the members of the Board would begin on January 1, 1962.

Five Years The President

Americans are prone to seize upon anniversaries as occasions to reminisce, evaluate, and celebrate. Inasmuch as July 1 marked the beginning of the sixth year of the presidency of Dr. R. Blackwell Smith, Jr., it may not be amiss to take a quick glance over this half-decade.

These have been eventful years, marked, as all eventful times are, by both many problems and many achievements. Bob Smith, after two as assistant president and ten years as dean of the school of pharmacy, came to office as president at a period when an unusually large number of major faculty posts, particularly in the school of medicine, either had been vacated or were soon to be filled by reason of various combinations of circumstances. On his fifth anniversary as president, every one of these major positions had been filled and a vigorous, capable team was at work on the job of building MCV into an ever better medical center.

The scope of the faculty changes in medicine is hardly realized until an enumeration of such posts as dean and chairman of these departments: medicine, pediatrics, pathology, psychiatry, radiology, community medicine, and physical medicine and rehabilitation is made. (A new chairman of the department of surgery was welcomed simultaneously with the new president.)

Important work has been done in defining the objectives of the school of medicine, in evaluating the teaching program, and in restudy of the curriculum.

Progress of similar significance has occurred in other schools.

A two-year program leading to the degree of associate in science and nursing has been established under a new and energetic dean of nursing. Accreditation of the school of nursing by the National League for Nursing was achieved in 1960.

Faculties of all schools have been enlarged and strengthened. In 1959, MCV became the first professional institution in the South to be awarded accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, which was a prelude to the accreditation of the school of nursing.

Pharmacy training has been reorganized from a four to a five-year course; one year, at least, of pre-pharmacy must be taken elsewhere. Important new programs in post graduate training and research have been instituted in the school of dentistry. Concrete advances have occurred in all the allied schools and courses—x-ray technology, physical therapy, hospital administration, medical technology, and graduate studies.

Resources available to the institution—not an intrinsic measure of progress but an element that should be taken into consideration in evaluating this period—have increased from $8,695,000 in 1956-57 to $13,359,000 for 1961-62. Expenditures for research have increased from $927,000 to $1,900,000. For the five years combined, the aggregate of gifts, grants, and research contracts was $9,581,327, exclusive of $1,845,000 in federal grants earmarked for aiding in the constructing and equipping of the medical education building and the Strauss Research Laboratory. The steady growth in funds available to the institution for research, although a part of a national trend related to the greater recognition of the place of research in education, is a tribute to the calibre of the MCV faculty and the confidence of business, industry, and government in its capabilities. Many factors enter into the figures—including relative value of dollars.

The physical facilities of the College have been greatly improved. A $6,000,000 medical education building is under construction and a $355,000 research laboratory is nearing completion. A 565-car parking garage was built to solve one of the urgent problems related to MCV's downtown location. Hospitals and clinics have undergone extensive improvements. The institution's first dormitories for students other than nurses were built and occupied, and the nurses' dormitories were expanded. A long-range capital program has been recommended to the Governor and his special commission studying these matters by means of which the institution hopes to meet many of the additional "human" needs of its student body, as well as to bridge some of the gaps in other phases of its operations.

The Scarab extends congratulations to Bob Smith on his first five years and best wishes for those ahead.

Myopia Spurs Broad Vision

By CHARLES HOUSTON

It might be highly instructive if a psychological research team could take apart Dr. William Thomas Sanger to see what makes him tick.

Tick he does, indeed. For 36 years he has been Mr. Medical College of Virginia. He has seen the plant value rise from one to 40 millions and its structures hog Richmond's eastern skyline.

He's short, full of nervous energy to the point of being fidgety even in repose, an intense talker.

Born with an extreme myopia, he's not sure whether he should count his near-sightedness as a curse or blessing. It did shatter his dream of medicine and research. But nature compensated by giving him a far-ranging inner sight to more than offset the handicap.

Bridgewater gave him his B.A. in three years. Indiana U. provided his master's, and the Ph.D. in psychology came from Clark in Worcester, Mass.

Fortune made him an administrator to that he applied the imagination intended for medicine and research.

A SATISFYING BACKWARD GLANCE

At 75 he looks back thankfully. Perhaps he has done more for medicine than he could have done as an M.D. Certainly his efforts have helped forward research that couldn't have been done singlehandedly in a hundred lifetimes.

Dr. Sanger has been the center of many a seamy controversy, but has always driven on.

MCV grew brick upon mortar at first, but scientific intellectuality followed fast. More than 100 research projects were pressed last year at a cost of some 1.7 million, of which more than 1.2 millions were in federal money.

His accomplishments even 15 years ago had been such as to lead a friend

The graduation and commencement period this year was a particularly pleasant occasion. First, all eighty-nine members of the senior class fulfilled the requirements and received their M.D. degrees. Second, the Scientific Assembly was held in conjunction with the activities of this period. All participating reported it to be a worthwhile and enjoyable occasion.

The beginning of the new academic year finds all departmental and divisional chairmanships filled with permanent chairmen for the first time within at least the last five years. Completion of the roster has been accomplished with three appointments during the past several weeks. Dr. Richard G. Lester was appointed chairman of the department of radiology, effective April 1, 1961. Dr. Lester is a graduate of Princeton University and was granted the M.D. degree by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. After residencies in medicine at New York City Hospital and in radiology at Stanford University Hospital, he joined the faculty at the University of Minnesota. He was associate professor of radiology there before coming to the Medical College.

Dr. Gerard B. Odell was appointed professor and chairman of the department of pediatrics, effective July 1, 1961. After obtaining undergraduate education at New York University, Dr. Odell matriculated at the Yale University school of medicine. His pediatric residency years were spent at Grace New Haven Community Hospital and at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He also spent a year in the department of experimental medicine in Cambridge, England, as a Commonwealth Fund Fellow and is a Markle Scholar. He came to the faculty of the Medical College from Johns Hopkins University, where he was assistant professor of pediatrics.

Dr. Solomon Papper was selected to chair the department of community medicine, effective July 1, 1961. Dr. Papper joined the staff of the department of medicine at this school in January, 1960. Dr. Papper attended Columbia University and received his M.D. degree from New York University. His medical residency years included experience at Goldwater Memorial Hospital, New York; Cushing V. A. Hospital, Framingham, Massachusetts; Thorndike Memorial Laboratories, Boston City Hospital, and Harvard Medical School. He will continue to hold appointment as professor in the department of medicine as well as professor and chairman of the department of community medicine at Medical College of Virginia.

One other temporary addition will be gratifying to the many who have known and worked with him. Mr. George Bakeman has returned temporarily on a part-time basis to assume some of the responsibilities of the associate dean until a permanent full-time replacement for Dr. Robert Q. Marston can be found. Dr. Marston became dean of medicine and director of the medical center at the University of Mississippi in Jackson, Mississippi, as of July 1, 1961.

School of Pharmacy

Fifty-five seniors graduated in June and of this group, fifty will be practicing pharmacy in hospitals and communities around Virginia. Five of the total group will enter graduate or medical school for further study.

Mrs. Sally Rhodes Bundy was the recipient of the Wortley Rudd Award presented by the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association to the student having the highest average on all subjects. The Crockett Award for highest average in pharmacy subjects was presented to Mr. Frederick James Allen, and the Frank P. Pitts Award for highest average in chemistry subjects was won by Mr. Gerald Weinstein. Mrs. Bundy received a check for $100 as recipient of her award while the other two winners received checks for $50.

The A. D. Williams Awards, given to students with the highest average in the respective classes in pharmacy, were won by: Mr. Frederick Allen, P-4; Mr. Andrew Canada, Jr., P-3; Mr. George Kellam, P-2 and Mr. Thomas Rayfield, P-2 (a tie); and James Wynn, P-1. Each of these students receives a check for $100 and an appropriate certificate.

Dr. William O'Malley, assistant professor of pharmacy, resigned in May to accept a position in industry. We have been most fortunate to obtain a very capable replacement in Dr. Werner Lowenthal, who will be on hand for the fall term. Dr. Lowenthal received his Ph.D.

at the University of Michigan and has been employed for several years with Abbott Laboratories in their product development section. We feel certain he will make a fine contribution to our teaching and research program in the pharmacy department.

School of Dentistry

Another June, another commencement, another class of dental graduates—with the Class of 1961 setting an unusual precedent! No previous graduating class in our history has matched the Class of 1961 in its recognition of the responsibilities which professional people should assume in relation to their privileges. Taking cognizance of their moral indebtedness to their Alma Mater and its needs to broaden its program, members of the Class of 1961 voluntarily offered pledges in excess of $42,000.00 to our DENTAL FUND to be paid within ten years of graduation. This gracious and liberal action developed on the basis of their own initiative, without coercion, came as a complete surprise to our faculty at commencement time. What a magnificent example for older alumni and those of the future!

Older alumni who returned to Medical College of Virginia for class reunions at commencement expressed amazement on many scores: the Wood Memorial Building, our dormitories, other structures recently erected and three now under construction; the extensive research activities in many fields including dentistry; faculty additions of renowned teachers; the spirit of Medical College of Virginia charged high with enthusiasm, hope, and dedication.

The Class of 1936 had a joyous 25th anniversary reunion at commencement. Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Kayne were hosts to the class at a dinner in their new home. Commemorating their reunion, the dental alumni of 1936 raised a substantial student loan fund as a gift to our school.

Summer activities at our school are many. All new juniors and seniors are attending our summer clinic session running during the morning hours through June and July. The faculty is engaged in numerous other projects: review of our curriculum, preparation of new teaching material, research, and study.

Washington Chapter

The Washington Chapter met at the Key Marriott in Arlington for their dinner on April 18. Dr. Grover C. Starbuck, Jr., D'41, secretary, had planned a splendid affair. Dr. Fred W. Hines, D'42, president, presided at the after-dinner meeting.

From Richmond, Dr. W. C. Henderson, D'37, president of the Alumni Association; Dr. R. Blackwell Smith, Jr., P'37, president of MCV; Dr. William F. Maloney, dean of medicine; Dr. Richard L. Simpson, Jr., D'35, professor of crown and bridge prosthesis; and the executive secretary brought news of the Association and the College.

Elected to office for the coming year were Dr. Henry A. Hornthal, M'24, president; Dr. Grover C. Starbuck, Jr., D'41, vice-president; and Dr. John E. Alexander, M'35, secretary-treasurer.

The growth of the Washington Chapter is bound to continue with the excellence of its new officers.

Virginia State Dental Meeting

May 2 was the date the MCV dental alumni held their luncheon at the Hotel Roanoke during the Virginia State Dental Association meeting.

Presided over by Dr. W. C. Henderson, D'37, president of the Alumni Association, the alumni were told of the higher percentage of dentists who were members of the Association this year. Dr. William N. Hodgkin, D'12, UCM, past president of the Association; Dr. J. B. Broadus, D'30, member of our Board; Dr. B. M. Haley, D'33, newly re-elected vice-president; Dr. Richard L. Simpson, D'35, former Board member; and Dr. Edward Myers, D'26, member of the MCV Board of Visitors, all gave inspiring talks to the group on participation in the Association. As a result, several who were in attendance paid their dues, thereby increasing dentistry's membership over pharmacy's.

North Carolina Chapter

The North Carolina Chapter held its annual get-together in Asheville on May 8, in conjunction with the Medical Society of the State of North Carolina.

Dr. Lloyd D. Miller, M'39, the president, arranged a lovely dinner at the Hotel Vanderbilt and made an eminently good toastmaster.

From Richmond Dr. W. C. Henderson, D'37, president of the Alumni Association; Dr. William F. Maloney, dean of medicine; and the executive secretary were present to bring news of the Association and the College.

Elected to office to carry on the fine old Tarheel traditions were: Dr. Millard D. Hill, M'28, president; Dr. Palmer H. Shelburne, M'27, vice-president; and Dr. J. W. Griffis, M'32, secretary-treasurer.

We shall look forward to being with them in Raleigh next year.

VPA Dinner

The pharmacy alumni who were in attendance at the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association convention met for a buffet dinner at the Hotel John Marshall on June 12.

R. Reginald Rooke, P'21, served as toastmaster for the event and did an excellent job. Dr. W. C. Henderson, D'37, spoke for the Alumni Association and told the group of the splendid record of pharmacy membership through the years thanks to the efforts of Mr. George F. Hendley, P'18. He also told the group of the progress of the Association.

Peninsula Chapter

The Peninsula Chapter met on June 17 at the Chamberlin Hotel. Dr. Thomas N. Hunnicutt, Jr., M'29, president, had arranged a delightful meeting.

Dr. W. C. Henderson, D'37, president of the Alumni Association of MCV, gave a most intriguing talk on the medical schools in Virginia, their foundings, and the early problems. His research brought to light some interesting facts about MCV and other schools.

A short business meeting was held after dinner and officers elected were: Dr. Paul Hogg, M'33, president; Mr. S. B. Wright, P'17, president-elect; and Dr. Thomas W. Sale, M'52, secretary-treasurer.

A dance followed, to which, regretfully, Dr. and Mrs. Henderson and the executive secretary were unable to stay.

Big things can be expected from this chapter.

Reunion, 1961

The Fourth Annual Scientific Assembly. This year, it was held in conjunction with the reunion and was highly complimented by the returning medical alumni. Shown in the picture are the First Annual Alumni Lecturer, Colonel Ralph M. Lechause, M'35, who gave a most interesting talk on "Certain Responsibilities of the Medical Profession in the Astronuclear Age," and Dr. Wyndham B. Blanton, Jr., M'50, the extremely capable chairman of this year's Assembly.

The Virginia Bishop

"A Yankee Hero of the Confederacy"

BY JOHN SUMNER WOOD

$3.50

THE thrilling life story of a truly great man, THE RIGHT REVEREND DOCTOR JOHN JOHNS of the Episcopal Church. He was born in Delaware, served churches in Maryland, chosen assistant to Bishop Meade of Virginia in 1842, and the fourth Bishop of Virginia in 1862. He was President of the College of William and Mary (1849-1854) where he did an outstanding job. He confirmed both Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee and rendered conspicuous service to the wounded and dying on many battlefields of the Confederacy.

Harvey B. Haug (M), of Richmond, Virginia, was honored at the close of the Scientific Assembly when his colleagues and former students gave his portrait to the College. Dr. Paul Larson in presenting the portrait said in part, "But the primary source of Doctor Haug's legendary qualities stems from the classroom. None of his students are apt to forget his breezy entrance with a broad smile, bow tie cocked jauntily, cigar in hand, and his first greeting of 'happy days are here again.' From that moment on, their attention was held not only by the clarity of his presentation of the subject but also by his flashing wit that kept each session alive with good humor.

"Nor are they apt to forget his frequent classroom quizzing and how, having carefully scrutinized his roll book to make his selections, he would make these known with elaborate emphasis on their current status of 'Mister.' And his reservation of quizzing of the women in the class for a single period heralded by him as 'Ladies Day.' And how out of all this evolved 'Harvey Haug Day,' those happy, good-humored days on which all of the male students appeared in bow ties, burnt cork mustaches, and lighted cigars, and, with the ladies outfitted imaginatively, took over proceedings for the hour with carefully planned skits, 'taking off' various of their teachers in pharmacology and other disciplines."

cially designed cubicles is now being equipped in the Wood Memorial Building. This clinic will be used by our graduate students and faculty for clinical research, and will fulfill an important purpose in our research and teacher training program. It is the first dental research clinic in this country financed by the National Institute of Dental Research, an agency of the United States Public Health Service, under a Federal grant of $54,000.

The Commission on the Survey of Dentistry recently published the report of its two-year study. This project, originally promoted by the American Dental Association, was conducted under the sponsorship of the American Council on Education. The report contains over 70 recommendations, many pertaining to dental education. These will have our serious attention in the months and years ahead. The recommendations on dental manpower and dental auxiliary personnel should be studied by everyone interested in dental practice and the dental health of our population.

While it is a long time to our next annual HOMECOMING it is not too early for you to make plans to attend. The dates are January 29 and 30. The General Assembly will be in session next January and hotel reservations in Richmond at that time may be difficult to secure later.

School of Graduate Studies

The school of graduate studies has had an eventful year and looks forward to the academic session ahead with an increased enrollment. During this past year, the graduate faculty has been designated as a formally organized body and has met twice to discuss matters pertinent to the growth and welfare of graduate study at the Medical College of Virginia. While most of the members of the graduate faculty are within the basic science departments where most graduate teaching is done, there are also some from clinical departments who are acting as research advisers for students in the basic sciences who have chosen to do their research in one of the laboratories of a clinical department.

The school of graduate studies is examining its own objectives, functions, and methods; and the dean has recently appointed three committees to study modern problems of graduate education as they apply to the Medical College of Virginia.

School of Hospital Administration

With the June graduation the roster of alumni of this eleven-year-old school passed the 100 mark and came to rest at 114. Approximately 40% of these men have remained in Virginia hospitals, and the rest have tended to stay in the southeast; although significant posts are manned by graduates from New York to California in 22 states, as well as a few in other countries.

During this past commencement the alumni of the school observed for the second year a day of administrative clinics. These clinics have been so well attended that they are now considered a regular feature of commencement week.

The morning session this year was devoted to an examination of the potentials of rapid reading. Dr. Robert Filer and Professor Cross presented the subject with a lecture, films, and a demonstration of training aids. It was impossible to expect that the reading habits of one's lifetime would be changed by a two-hour presentation, but interest was stimulated; and administrators were perhaps encouraged to see in improved reading speed with better comprehension another aid to a better understanding of administration.

Also during commencement week the executive committee of the school's alumni association took steps to implement a plan of financial support. An unrestricted alumni loyalty fund was set up. The number of graduates has now reached the point where modest, regular contributions to the school will provide a telling sum. Over the last two years the school's alumni association has supported projects to an amount exceeding $500. This money came from a sharing of dues. The loyalty fund will encourage personal contributions "beyond the call of dues."

The officers of the alumni association are: president, Mr. David Williamson, administrator of the Lewis-Gale Hospital, Roanoke; president-elect, Mr. Paul Flanagan, administrator of the King's Daughters' Hospital; and secretary-treasurer, Curtis Clayton, assistant director, University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville.

Dietary Department

Our group of dietetic interns, beginning September 18, 1961, will number nine; unless we accept a couple more late applicants. This group sounds like they are interesting young women. We hope they will prove to be a good class to add to the MCV family.

Vacations are nice, but do keep those of us left on the job quite busy. We anticipate some staff changes before the fall season but will announce them at a later date.

Best wishes for a good summer.

to give him up for dead.

The late Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, broadcasting about a routine, hospital dedication, praised him and his work.

A friend tuned in late, and subsequently reported:

"It was so laudatory that I thought you must have passed away during the night."

A DICTATOR WHO NOW CAN LAUGH

In his tender years, Dr. Sanger was tougher, and laughed seldom. He worked hard, believing work to be an end, and not a mere means to an end. Now, say friends, he has mellowed, and laughs easily.

"That's natural; most of us mellow with years," says Psychologist Sanger. His doctoral dissertation in 1915 was titled "Senescence," but it's a subject he knows only academically.

Called a dictator, he enters no denial. Empire builders, he says, have worked more efficiently as individuals than corporately.

"He always had difficulty delegating authority and responsibility," observes Thelma Hoke, his right hand as well as a goodly portion of his eyesight for a quarter century.

"But," she adds, "it was easy to take it away from him, if you just went ahead without asking."

She found early he could take catastrophe calmly only to upset the whole institution over such a triviality as loss of one of the numerous pink slips on which he wrote notes to himself.

SLUM CLEARANCE AN INCIDENTAL

For years he was Richmond's main slum-clearance effort. More than 100 houses, mostly dilapidated, fell before his bulldozing.

Times and circumstances were with him. Two World Wars advanced medicine, made research money flow easily.

Rats climbed to the hospital nursery once, and, characteristically, Dr. Sanger bought and closed the city dump that bred them.

He's a hard hobby-rider. Symphonic music is his top and abiding hobby. Horticulturally there were, in turn, peonies, lilacs, azaleas, and then a wildflower phase. Now it's boxwood.

"Every once in a while," smiles Mrs. Sanger, "we have to get a landscape architect to tell us what to dig up."

(Dr. Sanger credits Mrs. Sanger, a college mate, with vit-1 assists, from reading to him to keeping him in balance. His hobby-riding comes naturally from his father, Samuel Sanger, a Church of the Brethren minister, who had the first telephone in the neighborhood, the first windmill, and a hollow-wall house he built with bricks made of the clay excavated from the cellar.

BLOODHOUND FOR ENDOWMENT CASH

He reputedly has a bloodhound's nose for endowment money.

"When he smiles, rubs his hands, and affects the broad 'a,' watch out," says a friend. "He's on the trail of cash."

There's a story that once upon a time the late John Stewart Bryan went as a patient to MCV.

"Tell Sanger not to come to see me," he ordered jestingly. "It wouldn't be fair for him to try to get money out of me while I'm here flat on my back."

Happy inversions have been his—myopia begetting far-sightedness, administrative aptness carrying medicine and research to greater lengths than he could dream, and hard work providing lifetime satisfaction on a day-by-day basis.

Contact lenses bring him details now where thick spectacles gave only dim outlines. He's had to gain a new acquaintance with friends. He used to know them as voices and gestures. Now he sees clearly, and what he sees doesn't jibe with the pictures his imagination had painted.

And the lawn, he adds, is not any longer a velvety green carpet. Now he can see the weeds.

The 1 out of 20
that didn't get smoked

There's a lot of satisfaction in pointing out something good to a friend. That's why it sometimes happens that one cigarette out of a pack of Dual Filter Tareytons never does get smoked.

People open it to show its remarkable Dual Filter containing Activated Charcoal. They may not know why it works so well, but they do know this: It brings out the best taste of the best tobaccos. Yes, Tareyton delivers the flavor . . . and the Dual Filter does it!

Try a pack of Dual Filter Tareyton. We believe the extra pleasure they bring will soon have you passing the good word to your friends.

Tareyton delivers the flavor . . .
DUAL FILTER DOES IT!

HERE'S HOW: 1. It combines a unique inner filter of ACTIVATED CHARCOAL . . . definitely proved to make the taste of a cigarette mild and smooth . . .

2. with a pure white outer filter. Together they select and balance the flavor elements in the smoke. Tareyton's flavor-balance gives you the best taste of the best tobaccos.
